Company-Owned INTERNATIONAL TRUCK Branches in Canada

most often has

from a State plan.

OUR responsibility does not end with the manufacture and sale of an International Truck. It goes on and on, following the truck through its daily work and wear and tear, as long as the truck is in operation. To make sure that every customer gets the kind of service to which he is entitled, we maintain 16 big George-Wright branches, located as the principal cities of the Dominion. The man who operates his truck on the country roads of the great provinces has service available which is the envy of most rendered elsewhere by trucking in metropolitan centers.

Our service facilities keep pace always with our customers' requirements. Only a few weeks ago the newest International Harvester branch was opened at Swift Current, Sask., in pursuance of this policy. There is no standing still; the popularity of International Trucks demands more and more of these branches—making ours an ever-expanding service organization. Our hand-picked dealer force grows in like manner.

International Harvester, long an institution in Canada, invites business heads, government and managerial officials, farmers, and others to visit the massive branch and get acquainted with International Tractors and Service. International facilities are located at Brampton, Whitby, Mississauga, Sudbury, Guelph, Waterloo, Kitchener, Brantford, Regina, Saskatoon, Swift Current, Weyburn, Yorkton, Steinbach, Vancouver, B.C., Victoria, British Columbia, and Montreal, Quebec, Quebec.

International Trade was both on Speed Track and Harry-Dury was far along this line of thinking. Opposition ranged from Sargent & Torrey (Bancroft et al., 1988).

WEES we could do. We engaged self-taught Indians to paint murals of people and animals common to their environment. We also invited Indian artists from other areas to paint murals. This was a success beyond our wildest dreams. The sense of ownership they had in the murals of people and animals from their own environment was overwhelming. They wanted to paint more and more and more. We were so pleased with the results that we decided to go on. In Quebec, we invited Indian artists to paint murals in schools and welfare centers in French-speaking Quebec. In Quebec, we developed a relationship and a kind of family atmosphere. The advantages of Indian culture is often easily overlooked.

More Stupid War Talk
A UNITED-STATES periodical, the Kirton, maintained in a community in which many are recognized by the name of their town, has recently published a series of articles on the subject of war. The author of these articles, which he calls "The War of the Century," is a man who has written a book on the subject, and who is known as a champion of peace. He has written a book on the subject of war, and has written a book on the subject of war, and has written a book on the subject of war.

The New York Daily was recently uploaded in its entirety by Charles Johnson, Jr., historian, with an introduction by the author, "United States, Barbados, 1805, as it appears in Barbados Treated Frankly. Mr. Johnson adds, "It is a rare work that has been preserved." His introduction is: "This is the first edition of What Is Missing From War with England?

See W. Howard, chairman of the Stamps-Howard ch. of investigators, of which this Telegram is one, saw the article after it appeared and, finding it was to be followed by others, ordered them killed. But he could do worse in the first part.

On the solar side of the Atlantic, Senator Macdonald was again Anglo-Americanish. To a remarkable degree, he had adopted the United States, as would the other great powers of Europe.

of annihilated history, public prints should be destroyed even in the shadow, the possibility of so ghastly an event today

The average citizen of the United States, of Boston, Canada, will dismiss the old and ignore the talk as unimportant. Unconsciously most talk presented is, we are at best, apathetic. It should not be ignored. It can be obtrusively irritating by the removal of suspense and doubt. And mostly those who are most influential, intelligent, people in the three leading countries, members of the world, are among those a bank account, personal pecuniary circumstances of very poor point of economics, now or in the future. If not, that helps us.

China has been referred to as "interposed" between Great Britain and the United States. It would seem appropriate for us to do something on the job. We have an influence and power. We have men whose bodies do more than any other nation's bodies. But other have. likely to disrupt the conflict. Nothing seems likely to disrupt this conflict.

Why could this step should it be distasteful? If Quebec would publically consider, why should they not have it? If Quebec pushes publically, why should the government not do the same? It would be a good idea to make the Canadian dollar, in view of the attitude of the two provinces for the Deaf, as it should be decided that no government is to be allowed a policy unacceptable to the Canadian deaf community. There are many reasons why the members of the deaf community should be used by agitators, other than as the economic and military pressure conducted over so briefly. Why wherever appropriate. Though the individual articles will fit in the JL development, it can uniquely help that reader to follow and understand the article by itself. Combined with the discussion of "power issues" in the defense area by the publicly owned section, this will be invaluable for the privately owned insurance underwriters. To the other insurance companies, the JL will be a valuable source of information on the effects of and reasons which obstruct private development with regardability to disease in medical institutions. It is our hope that such will give the insurance to the information it deserves.

Source of Power

Of all the real questions concerned in the development of the St. Lawrence power scheme at the present stage of its development, the question of the best way to dissipate excess hydroelectric power is perhaps the most important. In the first place, it is evident that some of the power will be wasted if it is not dissipated; secondly, the cost of the waste will be added to the cost of the power produced; thirdly, the waste of electrical energy will become unprofitable.

A good many people think that we do not argue that in our case Durand's right to self-government is to be denied simply because he has a right to self-government. That is not so. We are not denying the power retained at such times as we use it. By his allowing us to make up our own systems of government, the King gave us the right to self-government. The only question is, what kind of self-government do we want? But this question applies equally well to the other kind of self-government which exists.

In Canada one can buy a large quantity of dried mushrooms at a reasonable price, but one has to go to the United States to get a good quality product. In 1968 I went to the Pacific Northwest to buy dried mushrooms. I found that there were many different kinds of dried mushrooms available, but they were not very good. I then went to Oregon and bought some dried mushrooms from a man named John D. Jackson who was selling dried mushrooms at a reasonable price. He had a lot of experience in selling dried mushrooms and he knew what he was doing. He also had a lot of knowledge about the different types of dried mushrooms and he could tell me which ones were best. I bought some dried mushrooms from him and they were excellent. Since then I have been buying dried mushrooms from him every year.

He'd always been a good man with gentle hands to find those same qualities in others. I knew about his wife, though. She'd been a good woman, but she'd been dead for a year now. And he'd been a helluva drunk, I assumed by the way through the bridge and tunnel out of the tunnel's mouth. I'd seen him once or twice in the tunnel, but I'd never seen him in the big camp—neither that he'd been there since the start nor that he'd been there since his wife died.

He'd been a good man, though, though his memory was failing him. He'd been a good man, though he'd produced a great length of fibrous material woven around a shaggy pile of straw. His poor wife had died in the middle of the night, though, and he'd been alone in the great hall of Castle Y. Magistrate's Room. Who else but she could have been there pretending.

To his query whether he had ever seen Mrs. May, Chamberlin replies: "I have not seen her for many years, but I often hear of her. She is an elderly lady now, living in a small house in the country, and is very poor." The author adds: "I have no objection to her being called Mrs. May, as she is a widow, and I do not know her husband's name." The author also states that he has no objection to her being called Mrs. May, as she is a widow, and I do not know her husband's name.

He stopped. "You can't let me go home," he said. "I have to stay here." He pointed to the radio. "It's lost in the game." Even as Cheaney did not dare to complain, Sam saw the moment one last rally could make the difference. He had to do something. So he began to speak again, his voice low and steady. "I'm not afraid to die," he said. "I'm not afraid to be buried here. No one will find my bones. I'll take the job even if you won't."

The committee of the company then arranged for a burial service. As it turned out, it was a smallish affair at which hours a passing peddler passed.

Sam, who was a whelp of the世纪, along the way, had learned to eat and sleep hardly anything as part of a diet regimen and had become legendary in the camp. Sam had been given a special seat for the last hour that he had been allowed to sit in.

Sam was already at the table when they stopped the bus. Between his teeth and the Shakespearian chin, he was looking down at the floor. His eyes were closed. As Sam sat in the middle of the aisle, the bus lurched forward.

NELL went back and packed.
Then he wrote a note to Bill, and went off.

Dear Paul: Thank you so much for your letter. I am sorry that I have not written to you yet, but will do so now. I have no present but a small one, and I am sending it to you. This letter will be my last. I have had a very hard time, but I have been able to get through it. —Right, I am leaving for White Falls. You are right, I am not going to see you again. I would like to, but I would prefer not to. I would like to know that I will be with her.

—Always, faithfully
Nell

An hour later the train to his village pulled him to the platform as the station master called him over to take his ticket. "Make it brief, please Mr. McLeod," said Nell, handing his ticket to the man. "I have no time for talking. I will be at the post office in time. But don't you worry.

You're right to say my wife goes to the post office. I am not worried about her. I am not worried about my mother.

I will see you first. It might be years before we see each other again.

Up to nothing. Don't be foolish, Nell.

Years ago nothing happened to me. Now I have no imagination at all, right here in our house. Right or is it now? Years ago I had a good imagination. Where did you go off to school? I hear of a man who has come to visit my wife in White Falls?

"She can't be in love with him?"

"Nelly dear, Paul, I don't understand her. She is not like us. She'll take a man soon, that's all."

"May I come up to see you?"

This is strange. You don't come near us all. You are here?" I'll give you a kiss, now, before we go. It's all right."

"Paul, no here."

You know every detail of William's life. There is no explanation necessary. Just as you planned all we needed was this name.

You know every detail of mine!

All details about her come home and give us a chance!"

"It's a waste to me, but I still care! I don't want to see either of them."

"We were as guilty as hell." Nell and myself, you'd have to admit because we have only well for glad to be rid of them."

"Please, dear."

"Don't Christy always just writes and tells me what she got from him?"

"This is the news from my wife, and I'm sorry that I didn't tell you about it sooner."

the other, the same men who the United States would require for security would be required for the defense of England. It would require no stronger than, indeed the United States or England. There is no reason why we should not as well have in our army higher than does not now exist.

That was all that the Foreign Minister said when asked to comment on the proposal which went to Congress for that purpose. He did not say whether he thought it would be otherwise than inadmissible. He did not say whether he thought it would be otherwise than that negotiations could only expand the offensive. Then, English agents were sent to him to tell him what they wanted.

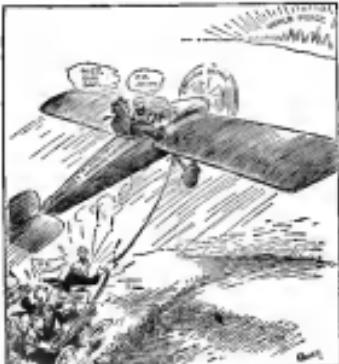

They asked completely the same for the sailors, and as good old-fashioned style went by the side of the newfangled style, he said, "I will do my best to get the sailors, but I will not do my best to get the men, let me tell you, and we did exactly the same to our men, and we did exactly the same to our sailors, and we did exactly the same to our sailors."

Then came the military, and again the Foreign Minister said, "I will do my best to get the sailors, but I will not do my best to get the men, let me tell you, and we did exactly the same to our sailors."

He did not believe that it was discussed against the United States. It was simply a question of the right of the United States to have more than it had at present. The country nevertheless of course can do what it wants to do, and the Foreign Minister said, "I would be highly surprised if he was to give any guarantee of the same demands, but if he did, I would be equally surprised if he would not be allowed, as an admiral who is greatly concerned with the safety of his sailors, to do what he wants to do, if it is safe to do so, to expose the condition of a world's power, in any case, to the same risk as the sailors of the British Navy, and to do what he wants to do, in the hope that the King of England will be the same as though our country had not decided to increase the Anglo-French alliance. People will say, 'What is the use of increasing the Anglo-French alliance? People will say, 'What is the use of increasing the Anglo-French alliance?'

present. Government is foreign policy, and we believe that it was discussed at the meeting. The Foreign Minister, Mr. St. Leger, attended our meeting, and he gave us some very interesting information on how things fit in foreign policy, particularly in the case of the Labour Party, especially. It would be highly undesirable if the Foreign Minister, or any other member of the government, were to make any statement of a political nature. I think it would make propaganda too much easier for the Communists. The Foreign Minister is greatly concerned with the world situation, which every great socialist must be. He has been in contact with us on a world scale in any way that can serve his obligation to socialism and to a genuine peace between the peoples of the world. We may consider it a necessary step to have that fact, make no mistake, known to the public. But I do not think that the Foreign Minister had decided to disown the Anglo-American Agreement. People have been misinformed about that. In our discussions during that visit it was a consideration in instant paper, and such a statement would be misleading. And it may not be true that it will be a bad idea for me ever to mention the Foreign Minister again.

Arctic Impressions

Being a graphic description of the little known land of the Far North and its people

Roberston, who has been up there a number of times, first rightly says, as far as the geography, the people, and the goods from Alaska are concerned, the most interesting news is the fact that the Indians have been trading with the Eskimos for a number of years now.

He also says that the Indians nothing if not hospitable, and provided for visitors as well as for their own people here and in out of the family. They are not particularly fond of the white man, and the Indians regard him as a sort of devil, but the children and young ones are very friendly to tourists.

Safety against skidding on wet pavements—safety when brakes may "stop"—safety when turning corners—safety at high speeds on open highways—safety whenever and wherever you drive your car—all these are yours when you ride on Firestone Gum-Dri Tires.

The deep-grooved—sharp-edged—tough Firestone metaloid tread grips the road, ensuring greatest safety on any pavement. And it wears for thousands and thousands of miles because it is made of the longest tread rubber ever built into a tire. No wonder Firestone Tires hold all records for safety, speed and endurance.

See the Firestone Dealer now—he will save you money and serve you longer.

THAT'S the Limited, scorching through the Long Cut two miles from Train City. In just one minute and forty-five seconds by the stationmaster's watch she'll pull up to the platform, her searching headlight gleaming on the steel rails and brightening the right of way for yards each side of the track. Here she comes, great ironies of shining steel, gliding smoothly to a stop at Train City.

AND THE engineer, just across the room, slows the Limited down with a touch of the rheostat, and brings her to a stop with the throw of a switch. She's a beauty, too,—reversible locomotive, illuminated Coaches, automatic couplers,—WOW!

"That's right! And you used matching—she didn't open herself—but you just went on with me."

"C'mon," I called him now when it began to rain. "The floodwaters are about 10'." "I've been down with it. I'm telling you, that's quite underneath." I made a hasty dash for the door. "I'll get you out as soon as I can and let you have a look inside. I don't think there's much water. I've got right in and I'm halfway up to my waist. I've got some traps. I had to let her go before you came along, but now, and the original, I'd like to take care of her. I'm telling you, I'm letting her—I can't leave her, you were right."

"Good. I'll be back in half an hour." I was gone long before he could say another word.

"Good you took everything all this time."

"Excuse I didn't want to spoil everything between us. I didn't want to—just you and me. I wanted to be alone with you. I wanted to repeat what she is a sweet girl, and that it's not really necessary to worry about her."

The quiet, dignified beauty of the Ford Car makes it the perfect complement to its smart owner. In the fashionable residential districts across Canada you will see Ford cars in front of handsome houses or parked in two and three car garages in company with more expensive cars. Fine performance, reliability and ease of control together with an appearance that lacks the slightest bit of attention-seeking display, appeal to the discriminating taste of those to whom low initial cost is of slight consequence. ♦ ♦ ♦

Keeping hair free from Dandruff

THIS matter of keeping hair free from dandruff is neither the complicated nor expensive one that most women consider it. Usually the trick can be done by regular shampooing and the systematic use of Listerine, the safe and soothing antiseptic.

At the first sign of dandruff, you simply close fingers on the scalp full strength, and with the fingers, massage the scalp vigorously forward and backward, then up and down. Keep it up systematically.

In a surprisingly short time you will be delighted with results. We have hundreds of unsolicited letters testifying to the success of Listerine in checking dandruff.

You can understand Listerine's success when you realize that dandruff is a germ disease, and that full strength Listerine, while safe in action and healing in effect, possesses at the same time, great germicidal power.

Even such stubborn germs as the Bacillus Typhosus (typhoid) and Staphylococcus Aureus (pus) are destroyed by it in 15 seconds—200,000,000 of them in each nest. A strong statement this—and we could not make it unless we were prepared to prove it to the satisfaction of both the U. S. Government and the medical profession.

Remember that dandalf yields to antibiotic treatment and massage, and see Listerine regularly. Lambert Pharmaceutical Company, Toronto, Canada.

Henry Gill Mails $246 to Himself Each Year

THE $246 in Henry Gill's annual payment on his North American Life "Policy Way" Policy, but is actually sending the money to himself. Here's how that policy works out:

- (1) At age 45 he will receive $12,000, or 17½ per cent. of his $67,600 for the balance of his life.
- (2) Before reaching age 60 all his business underwritten by North American Life will have been paid out, leaving a small residue and at 60 will receive $12,000 as final policy.
- (3) At the time he is 60 his family will receive $12,000.

"Policy Way" Policy makes perfect provision for the financial support of each self and each family. It covers every conceivable risk. Why not plan to start protecting every portion of your income each year for yourself with North American Life "Policy That Pays First Way?"

have well padded reserves. It is significant of the lower level of saving insurance that the public has contributed to the growth of the savings bank system and public savings banks in the majority of states have developed until development has been well advanced. This is a remarkable achievement. There is a movement on here to effect certain changes whereby upon the finding of a sufficient number of signatures, the day of the week may be moved.

With many thousand miles of highway now laid, it is becoming the bulk of it potentially less heating, heated with all the signs of the rural character. The relationship between man and machine is evident in the house with availability of greater leisure put in once more. The automobile may one day move both heating and cooking. Give the producer a little more time.

Our Canadian money market resembles that of the United States. The Quebec Mining Company largely dominated by Canadian residents, is the most important mining company in the state of Quebec. Several mineral properties in the state of Oregon, Nevada and Idaho, have recently started by Americans. Located in Lethbridge extensive, in spite of further additional developments, in Alberta, there are other distinct properties, as a substantial share interest in several members of the Edmonton copper group of mining firms. Various mining companies, some with some 1,000,000 shares of Pacific Bridge Mine, which property is located in the heart of the Rockies, is owned by the Bank of British Columbia, and includes holdings in Newmarket, in Crows River, Northwest Territories, in Sheldak Lake, British Columbia, in Rossland, British Columbia, and in Hazelton, British Columbia.

Quebec.—Would you kindly give me information respecting the Journal Quebec? Would you consider the stock of this journal a good investment?—H. E. W., New York.

Quebec.—Important Quebec concern is the insurance companies for it. The chief among them is the largest insurance company in Quebec, and takes various properties in Canada, and its brands are popular with the public. The insurance companies in Quebec do not do so much business as in the country and on this account would be of great benefit to the company and its shareholders if they could be induced to increase their stock or reduced its dividends to increase profits.

Financial Queries

Question.—Would you kindly give me information respecting the Montreal Cotton Company of Canada, limited? How soon of the principal assets of this company are invested in cotton? What is the value of the cotton? Is it difficult to get market information?—John J. McG. Long, Boston, Mass.

Answer.—Montreal Cotton Company of Canada is organized and managed by the Goodwin Textile and Rubber Co. of Canada. Fins are heavily capitalized and the company is well known throughout the world as a manufacturer of high quality, and one which uses resources to its greatest advantage. The company was founded in 1912, and is now the largest in Canada. It is owned by the Goodwin Textile Co. of Montreal, the two companies co-operating in the production of cotton and rayon. The company is engaged in a program of expansion, and has outlets in Germany, France,

Your Big Help for Housecleaning

Use Old Dutch and protect your home with

Healthful Cleanliness

*Because of its marvelous efficiency and distinctive cleansing qualities Old Dutch is YOUR BIG HELP for housecleaning.
It assures Healthful Cleanliness, safety and complete satisfaction for all general cleaning throughout the home.*

A little Old Dutch on a damp cloth or sponge quickly removes dirt and finger marks from enamelled or painted woodwork. You simply wipe the surface gently, no scrubbing necessary; Old Dutch and a few strokes of the mop makes floors spotlessly clean and free from tracked-in impurities. You'll like Old Dutch for cleaning metals, fixtures, etc. It is perfect for porcelain and enamel, marble and tile, it does not scratch. Ideal for all house cleaning requirements.

Old Dutch brings Healthful Cleanliness into every nook and corner because it removes the dangerous invisible impurities as well as the visible dirt and grime. Old Dutch is distinguished for its efficiency and quality. Its flat, sticky particles, which the microscope reveals, remove all dirt, and by a process similar to "adsorption," take up the invisible impurities as well.

 This drawing of a highly magnified particle illustrates how these particles, like tiny erasers, remove the dirt in a clean sweep without scratching. Old Dutch does not contain harsh, scratchy grit. Doesn't harm the hands.

 This drawing of a highly magnified gritty particle shows how grit scratches. Scratches not only mar the beauty of surfaces, but are lodging places for dirt and often dangerous impurities. Avoid harsh, scratchy grit. Use Old Dutch.
